Give everything you undertake in life your best effort. Do what you believe to be “right”, not expedient, popular or self-serving. Fulfill your obligations and responsibilities with fidelity, maintaining the sanctity of your honor inviolate, second only to family. Respect yourself and others in all things and treat everyone as you would want to be treated under similar circumstances. Allow no one’s abuse of you or others, by word or deed, to go unchallenged, realizing, the measure of a person’s character is not what they do when they know others are watching, but rather what they do when they think no one is watching.
